9 October 2003

Dementia has become the big fear for many in the 21st Century. Already affecting 18 million people across the world, the number is set to double over the next 25 years having a devastating effect on the lives of carers as well as people with dementia themselves, and setting a major challenge for governments, health, housing and care organisations throughout the world.

As we learn more about the nature of dementia and its impact on people's lives, significant changes are happening in the way services are provided to assist people with dementia and help them and their carers to have more control over their lives.

This major European conference will be a showcase for services at the cutting edge of care, highlighting new directions and successful innovations in this field.

Merseyside Maritime Museum, the conference venue, is in a former bonded warehouse, part of the historic Albert Dock on the banks of the River Mersey. The museum, opened in 1980, tells the story of one of the world's greatest ports and the people who used it. The museum's collections reflect the international importance of Liverpool as a gateway to the world, including the city's role in the transatlantic slave trade and emigration.
